TearFall is a place where my family and friends can stop by and see pictures of places I have been, hear music and watch videos from various artists and with any luck have a great experience at the same time. TearFall is in a state of unrest at the moment. For those of you that have visited previously the site has changed dramatically and will continue to change frequently in the coming months. For those that are visiting for the first time i bid you "welcome" and ask for your patience
